

MATT'S NEW LOOK IS AN EYE SORE!

AGING Matt Damon is eyeing a more youthful look — and insiders and experts say he went under the knife to achieve it!

“Matt got the surgery earlier this year because he wanted to fix the sagginess around his eyes and look fresher-faced now that he’s hit his 50s,” snitches a source.

NOW
Damon's
peepers pop,
our doc says

Cosmetic dermatologist Dr. Mariano Busso, who has not treated the 52-year-old Good Will Hunting star, says the upper blepharoplasty surgery could also help Damon see straight!

“He may also have had this procedure to improve his eyesight,” says the Miami, Fla., doctor. “When your eyelids are too hooded, you can’t easily look in certain directions — specifically up.

“It seems that for Matt, he had so much skin that it impacted his vision!”

The procedure to remove excess skin and fat is delicate and Busso believes in Matt’s case, the surgeon went too far.

“I believe his doctor removed too much skin, which has dramatically changed his look — and not for the better!” explains the dermatologist.